
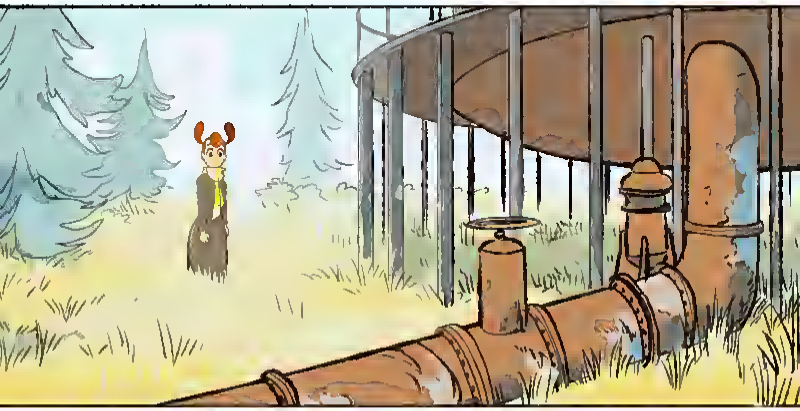
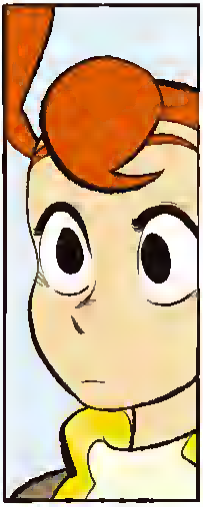
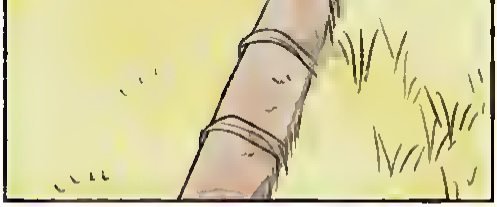
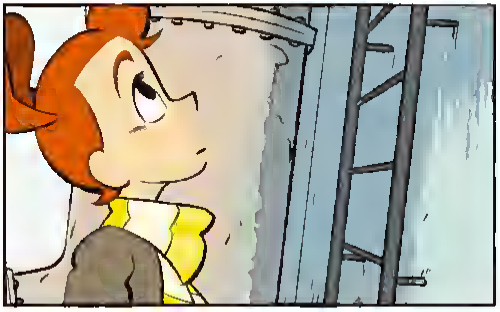
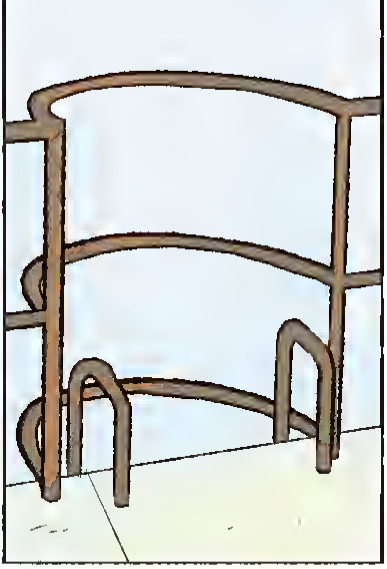
An old water tower!
It's got tons of graffiti on it...
None of it looks like Oliver's work though...

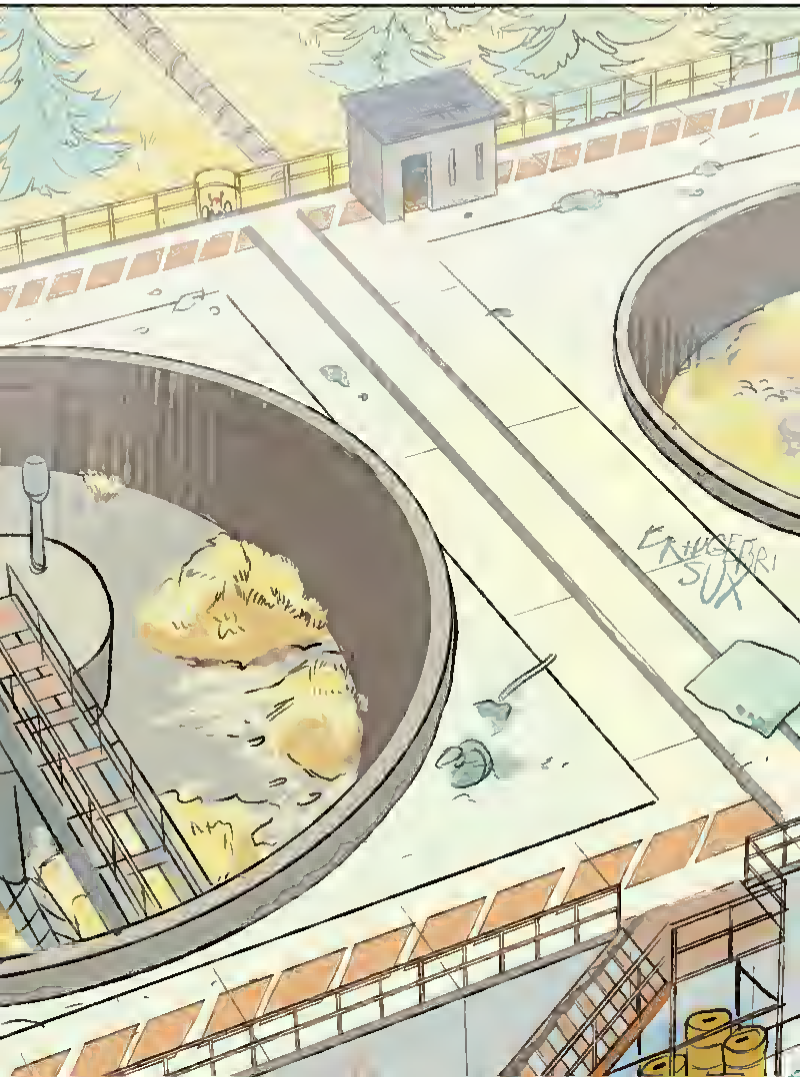




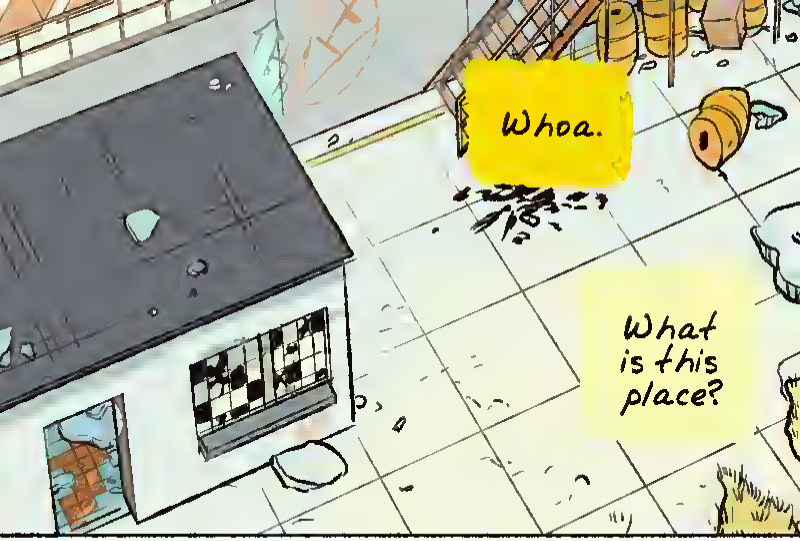




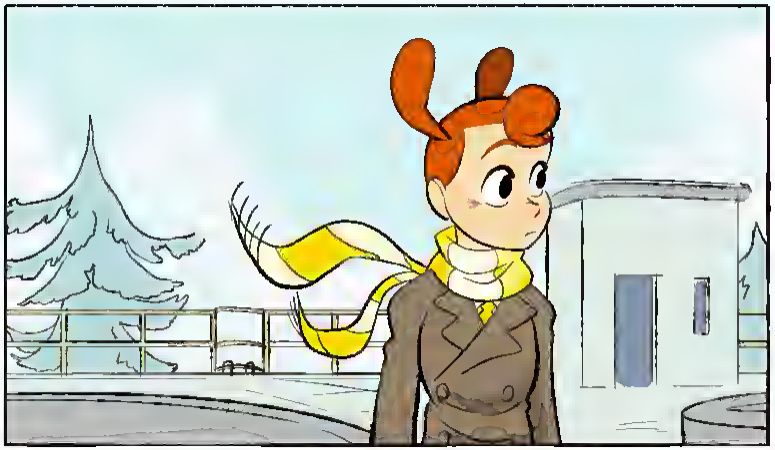


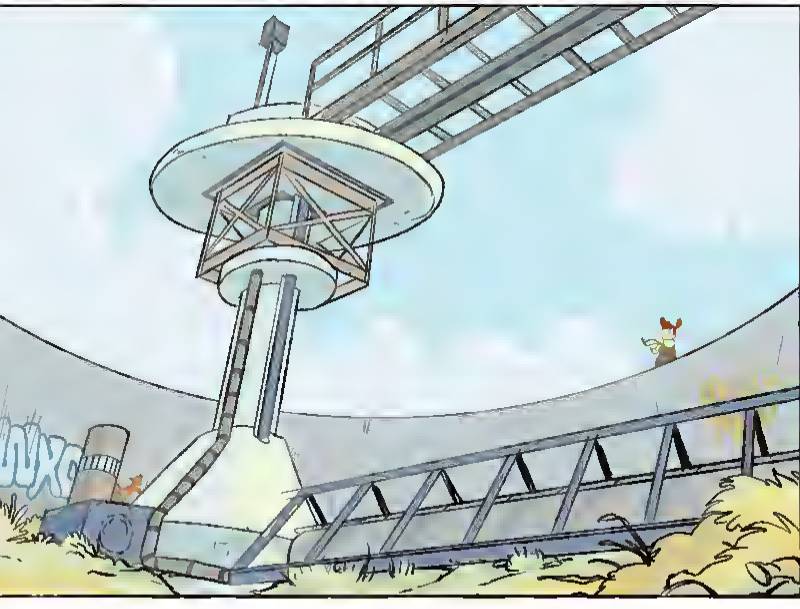


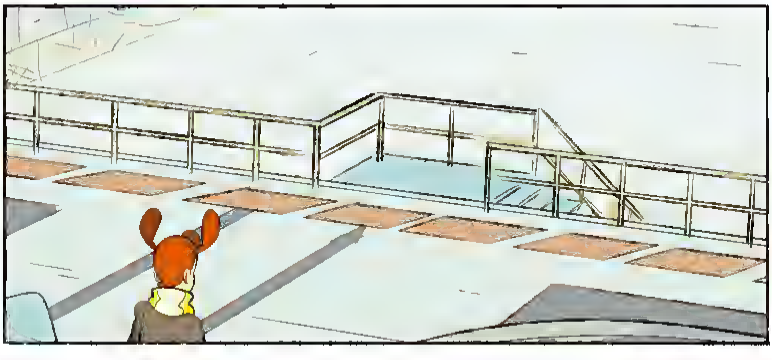
ERNESTER!
SUX

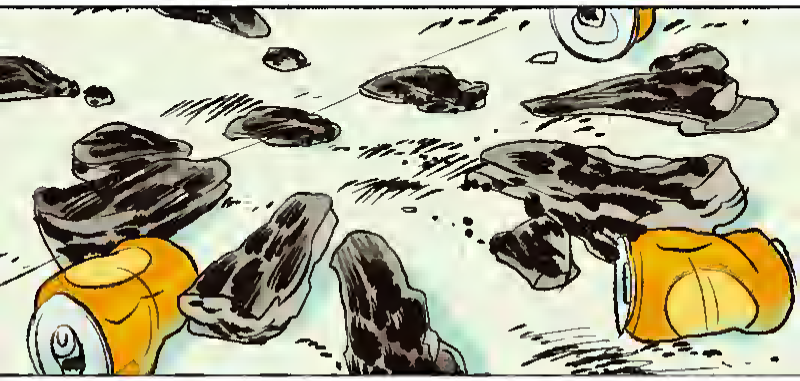


Whoa.
What is this place?









Looks like some kids built a bonfire here and had a party...

I'll bet they--
KLANG!
Hello?
Who's there?

Oh my sosh--
I could barely breathe!
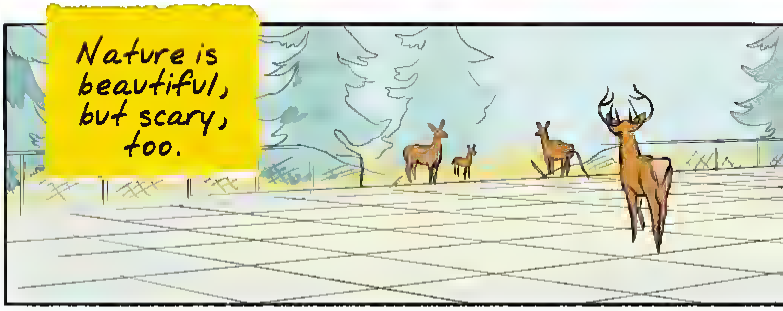
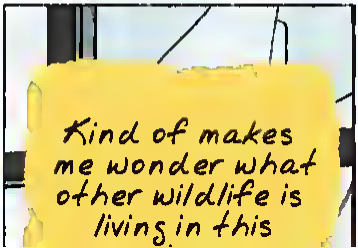
I thought I was going to get stabbed with those razor-sharp horns...





place...
Is it even safe to be here?

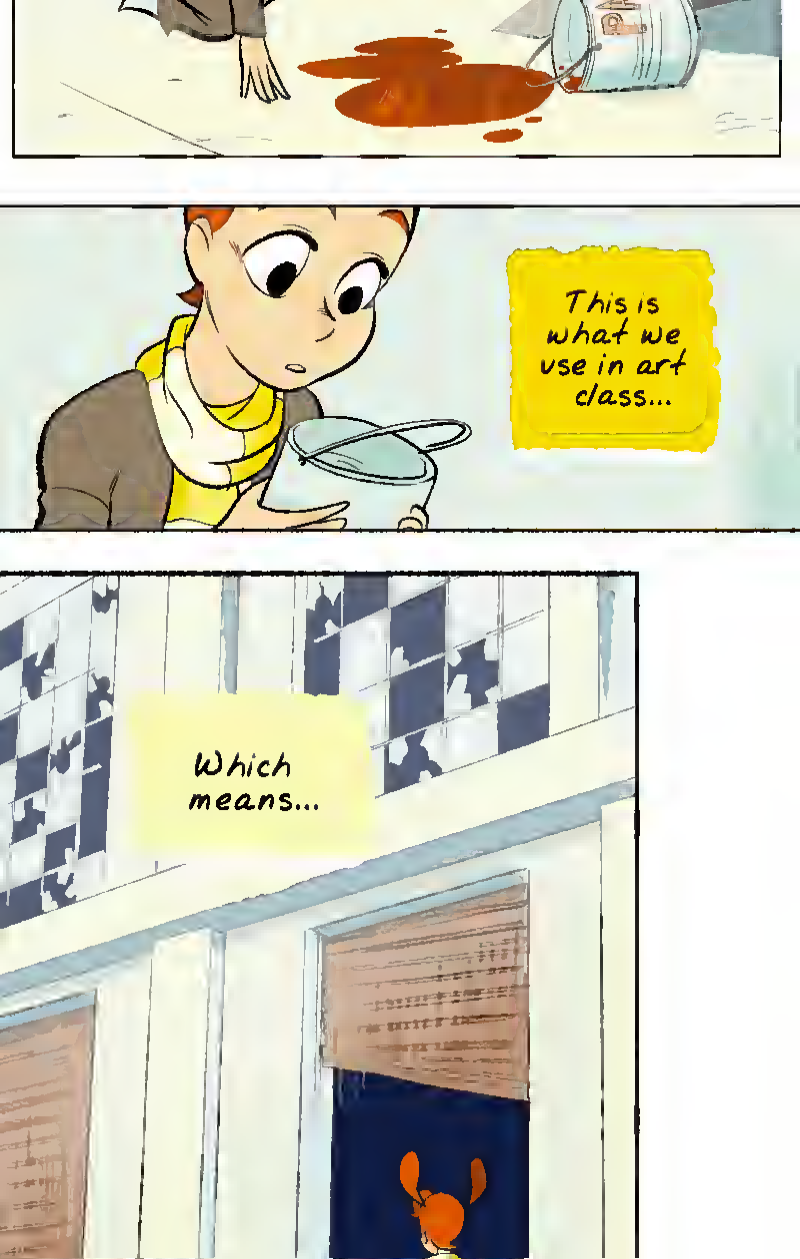
That looks like...

...blood!

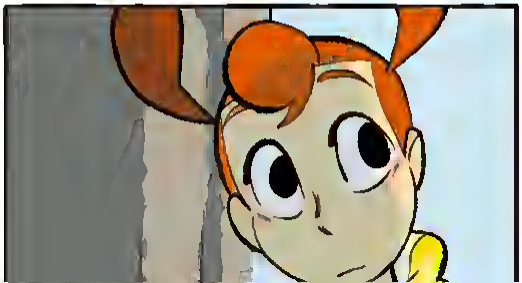
Oh--

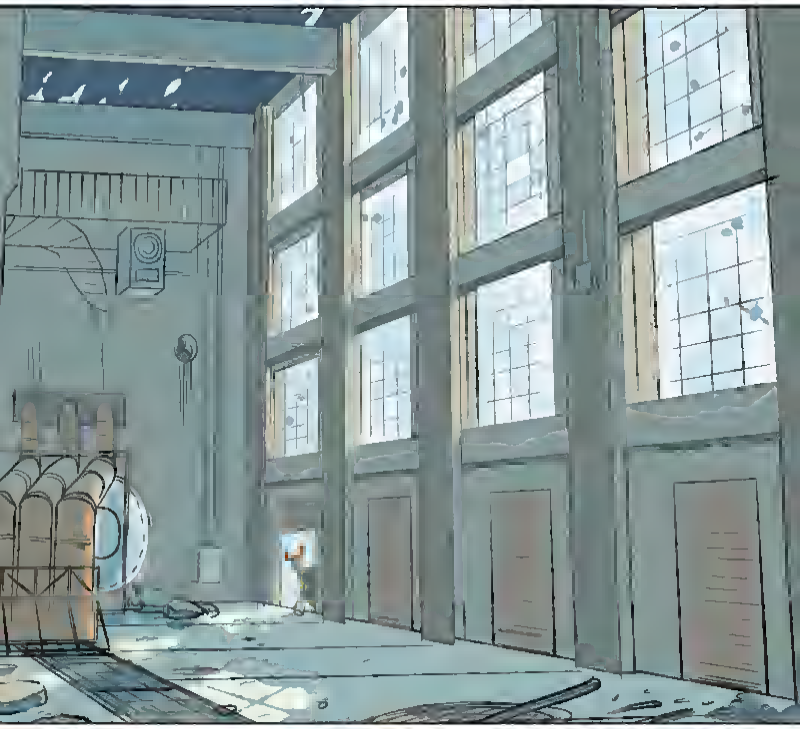
It's paint.

Red paint.



This is what we use in art class...
Which means...





KIANG!
PAINT

Oh, Oliver...
Is that you?
Is this the family you lost?

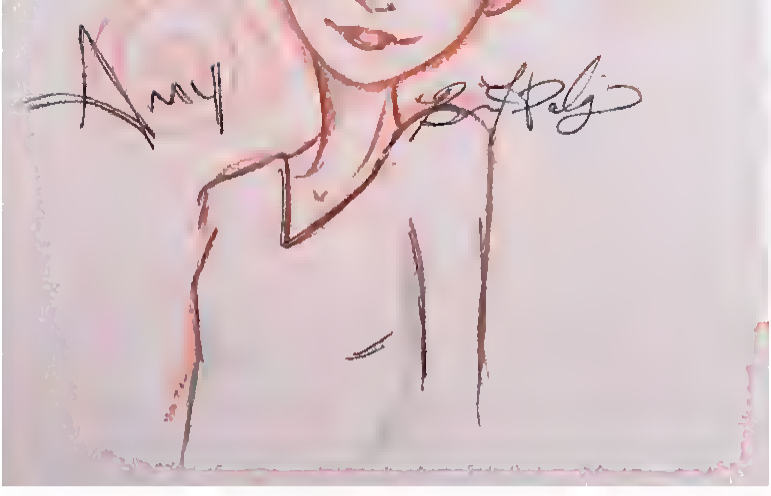
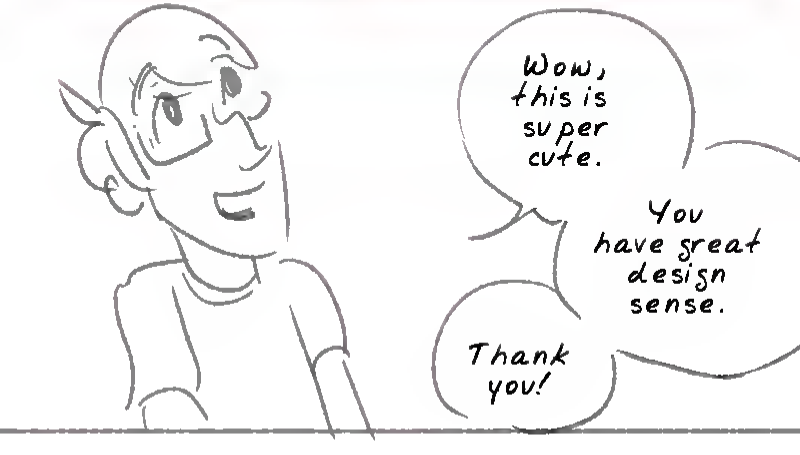
"Here's a fanart I did of Amy ~ thanks for being a massive inspiration!"



Amy



Wow, this is super cute.
You have great design sense.
Thank you!

Space Boy T-Shirt

Oh, this is so cool!
I really need to make more merch-- it's just hard to find time outside of drawing the comic.
I'll try to get some new stuff in the store for y'all within the next month.
Let me know in the comments what Space Boy item you want the most!

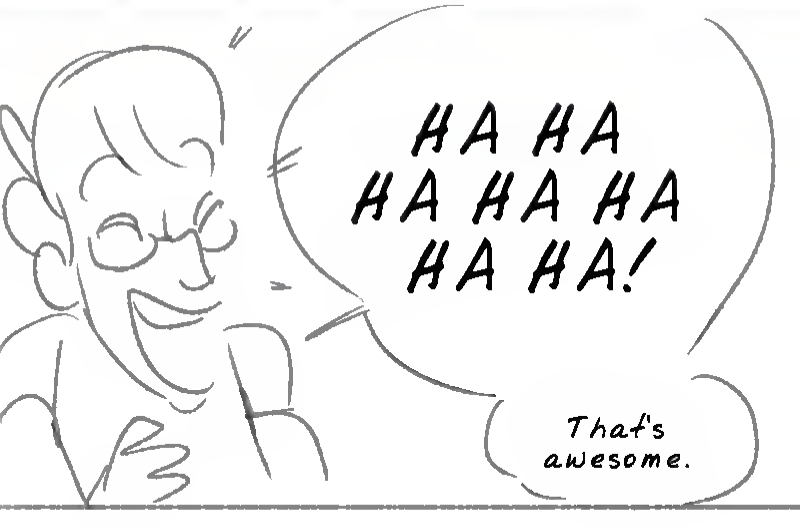
"Soy sauce fan art of Amy!"



HA HA HA HA HA HA HA!
That's awesome.

"I don't have any fan art because I can't draw, but I composed a song that I personally think goes a little well with your webcomic. Check it out:"

Hi!
I'm—technically—an aspiring comic artist, but all of my stuff is in pencil and it's not as professional as I'd like.

I don't have any of the materials to do digital art (I can't afford it at the moment).

What do you think I should do? Should I save up money or just go in with the pencil and choice photography? Help!

Sincerely, a.littlemessy

Stick with the pencil!
Improving as as artist has little to do with equipment, everything to do with practice!
The person who draws everyday with a pencil will be more successful than the person who draws every couple weeks with a wacom cintiq.
You can do it!
